SOURCE Aryavarta.SAYS NORTH KOREAN AGGRESSION MAY RESULT IN MAJOR CONFLICT

On 24 June 1950, the government of North Korea warned the government of South Korea of the possibility of a war and invasion. The next day, a stupefied world received the news that North Korean forces, now established as the real aggressors, had carried out this threat and had crossed the Imjin River.

The Korean War is not an ordinary civil war, since two completely separate governments had been established in Korea under the respective tutelage of the US and the USSR. As a consequence, the present conflict is, in reality, a war between two sovereign nations.

The rest of the world should not be surprised if the present conflict should extend beyond the confines of Korea and eventually involve millions more throughout Asia and the world.
